CALL FOR ABSTRACTS AND PANELS

The social sciences, as a collective area of scholarship, play an important role in the achievement of the UN Sustainable Development Goals. The different theories, principles, tools, and methodologies of the social sciences have been proven to be useful in the different phases of the SDG program implementation, which include research, capacity building, people mobilization, and community organization. Issues relating to health, education, the environment, poverty and inequality, food security, gender, peace, and justice, water and sanitation, decent work, sustainable cities, innovation, economic growth, renewable energy, and climate change are very social in nature.

This international conference aims to strengthen and deepen the integration of the social sciences and SDGs through the key A.R.E.A.S. of education in the 21st century, which refers to academics, research, engagement, advocacy, and synergy. This conference highlights the contribution of the social sciences toward attaining the UN Sustainable Development Goals. It shall focus on how the social science disciplines interrogate and respond to social problems relating to the 17 global challenges that we are collectively addressing through our communities, institutions, and global partnerships. Ultimately, we aim towards doing our part to uplift human conditions and to make Earth a sustainable planet now and for the next generations.

We welcome educators, researchers, students, program implementers, government and industry personnel and leaders, community organizers, youth leaders, and professionals around the globe to participate in this international conference.
